LS,

Resourcify showed up on my radar while I was looking into circular economy platforms - and the more I read, the more it clicked. The circularity program manager role sits at exactly the intersection I've been working toward: operational complexity, sustainability outcomes, and the kind of cross-stakeholder coordination that either breaks or holds a program together.

At South Pole I've spent the last few years at that intersection. Managing the Accelerator portfolio meant holding program integrity across multiple early-stage initiatives simultaneously, coordinating between technical teams, consultants and enterprise clients, and translating messy operational realities into structured decisions. I also led IAM/SSO integrations and performance improvements on live tools used by 30+ enterprise clients, so I know what it takes to keep things running as designed under pressure.

The ESG reporting side maps naturally too. I've built and shipped tools for CSRD compliance and climate risk assessment, so I understand the regulatory stakes your MedTech and Pharma customers are navigating. That context helps me speak their language.

Ultimately, this is another chance to fight climate change with real leverage - this time through circularity programs with measurable material impact. That's exactly the kind of work I want to be doing.

I look forward to expanding on this in an interview.

Regards,
Milo de Vries