LS,

After recently buying my nephew a phone on refurbed, seeing the job on inclimate immediately clicked for me. I want to be building products that fight throwaway consumerism at scale, and a refurbished electronics marketplace is about as direct a shot at that as I can think of.

The PM Seller Happiness role maps well to what I've been doing. At South Pole I did tech and product for several SaaS tools: drove architecture, API integrations, IAM/SSO implementations, UX design and user testing. I know what it takes to build B2B-facing products that need to be robust, reliable and actually used. I've worked closely with engineers on technical trade-offs, written specs for integrations, and tracked product KPIs through full launch cycles.

CO2ok, the startup I founded and ran for five years, was fundamentally a merchant-facing integration product. I onboarded 50+ sellers across multiple e-commerce platforms, handled the full seller journey from onboarding to support, and made data-driven calls on what to build, what to sunset, and how to grow. I was deeply involved in the tech, built quite a lot myself.

I see climate change as the most urgent crisis humanity is currently facing, and refurbed is one of the more credible products fighting it from the demand side. I'd love to join the fight against climate change at refurbed.

I look forward to expanding on this in an interview.

Regards,
Milo de Vries
